

Wanted: Another Happy Home

Roxie, a graduate of an obedience training program, sits on command during a walk, then smiles for the camera.

Home for Little Family Needed

Affectionately known as Mama, Papa and Baby Bear, these three tiny terriers were found wandering the streets, hungry and scared. Mama and Baby were rescued first, and became elated when Papa was brought in a day later. This delightful little family would love to remain together if a kind person or family can give them a good home.

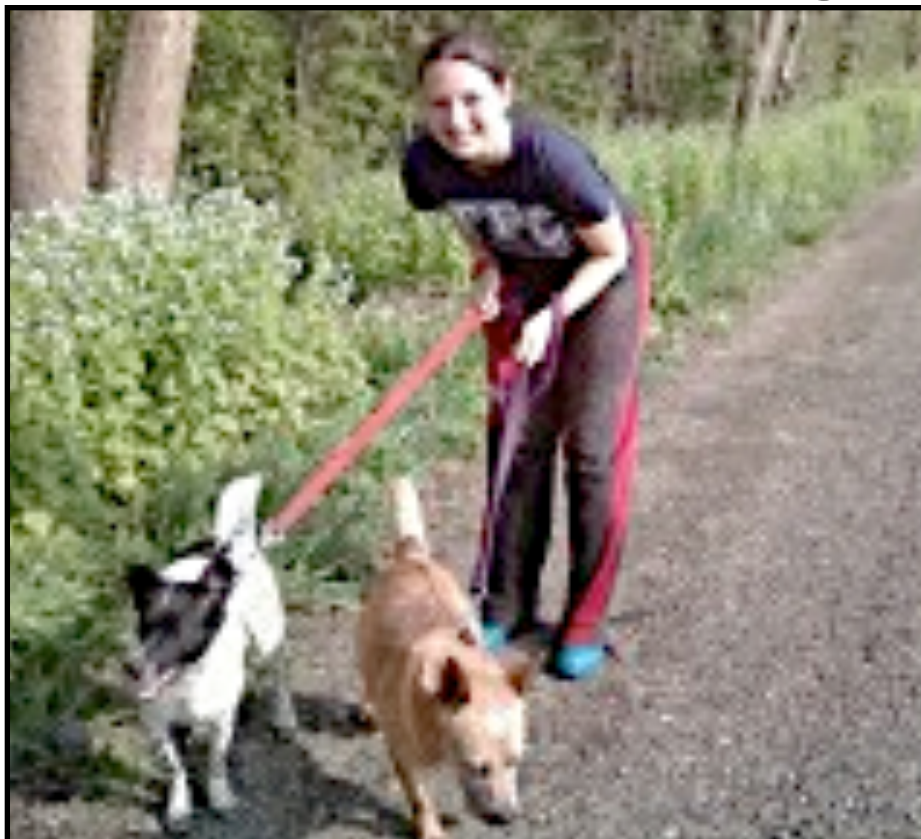

The Oasis staff celebrates every adoption, but when Roxie found a new home last year, the volunteers were ecstatic. The middle-aged girl with such a wonderful disposition had been waiting a long time. The match seemed perfect, and it was. Sadly, Roxie was returned to the shelter recently when her “mom,” developed serious health problems and could no longer care for her. Roxie has handled her return with amazing grace. On any given morning she can be seen running around the yard, jumping and playing with dogs years younger, but she deserves another good home. Hershey also came back to the shelter when her mom could no longer care for her. Like Roxie, the friendly American Staffordshire Terrier had been a great family member and was the victim of bad luck. Hershey misses her home a great deal. She is happiest with people.

Hershey enjoys the sun but wonders where her recently adopted playmate has gone.

OC Vol To Continue Work With Dogs

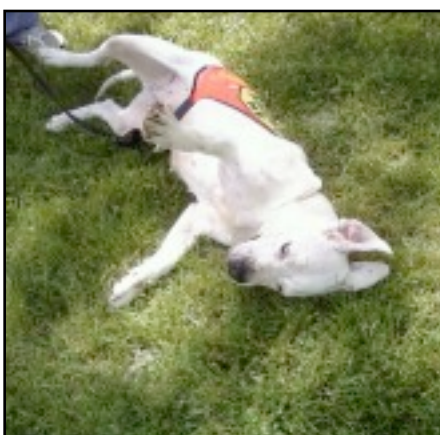

Oberlin College students have been volunteering at Oasis for several years, walking dogs and providing them with attention and affection. Ame, now completing her final year at OC, has been a volunteer extraordinaire for four years. She has taken her work with animals seriously, spending summers studying works of dog experts and returning to apply her skills and knowledge to Oasis dogs. Ame will graduate this month and head east, where her work with animals will continue. She has accepted a position with a Philadelphia shelter at which she interned earlier this year. The staff's thanks, best wishes and fond memories will go with her.

Ame gives Bonnie and Clyde a chance to stop and smell the flowers.

Ahhhhh....Spring!
